A Ph.D. in Education is the highest degree one may earn in the field of education. The doctoral programme aims to develop the knowledge and expertise in both qualitative and quantitative methods to conduct a high quality research at developing research skills to contribute to professional knowledge and practice.

Graduates of doctoral programmes can aspire to work as professors at the university level. This involves not just teaching university students but also conducting research on behalf of the university. Professors often get the opportunity to present their research at conferences.
