From Director's Desk

Welcome
Dear Colleagues,

Public health in India is still in its infancy stage though we have received accolades in eliminating Poliomyelitis, Guinea worm, Yaws, Maternal & Neonatal Tetanus and many are on the verge of elimination. But a lot more needs to be done in this field and improving public health remains a serious challenge. There is a dire need to establish training facilities for public health specialists along with identifying the scope for their contribution in the field. With the beginning of our School of Public Health, we are contributing in developing skilled public health professionals for India and world. This is a multidisciplinary effort towards addressing the current and future challenges in public health.
